Work Experience

Labor and Delivery Registered Nurse, Charge Nurse

George Washington University Hospital - Washington, DC

March 2020 to Present

As an L&D RN I do bedside care as well as OR circulation nursing on a very fast paced unit with a sometimes very unstable population of patients. The position is very challenging but I thrive under this type of work. When I am in the charge position I supervise a team of approximately 10-12 nurses as well as 2-3 scrub techs, while balancing the needs of a large medical team of doctors and residents in a large teaching hospital. I thrive under pressure and am a perfect candidate for a busy hospital. I work very well with physicians in a teaching hospital setting as well as those in private practice. I am often a preceptor and love teaching new nurses the ropes.
